"The Easter Lady." Greetings to all.

THE EASTER HARE

He Should Not be Confused With the Common Rabbit build up a dinosaur from a decayed tooth in another million years and who mix up history with historical novels, a little time is required to disentangle the truth from the tradition.

Now, be sure not to fall into the unscientific error of confusing the sacred hare with his humble American cousin, "Brier Rabbit." The rabbit is all well enough in his way, and without him we shouldn't have Uncle Remus, perhaps, and a lot of people would have to take out accident graveyards instead of prowling around graveyards in the dark of the moon.

But the rabbit is not the hare, and he has nothing to do with Easter. There are no hares in the east and south, and on the plains they insult the American hare by calling him a jack or jackass rabbit.

This distinction between the hare and the undersized rabbit is really important, and chiefly because the hare burrows in the ground, while the hare makes forms of grass for his habitation.

It is Germany from which we have borrowed the tradition of the Easter hare, who is quite as important a figure in his way in the fatherland as is St. Nicholas himself at Christmas.

Where did the Germans get the hare myth? To determine that you would have to make a pretty long excursion into the past. And perhaps in the end it would be "up to" the sphinx to answer you.

For it is a fact, even if it is a fable, too, that the moon and the hare and Easter, likewise the Easter egg, are all

"un" is hare, or "open," and the moon is "the open eyed watcher of the skies at night." But that isn't all. The Egyptians being a people of few, because difficult, words, made "un" do duty for "period" too. Thus the hare, being never comatose, "became the type of periodicity, human and lunar, and as an opener became associated with the opening of the new year at Easter." Finally it came to be connected in the popular mind with the eggs broker, to signify the opening of the year. "And there you are!" exclaims triumphantly the enthusiastic scientist to whom we are indebted for this information.

In Germany, if little Hans and Gretel are good, the white hare steals softly into the house on Easter eve, when everybody is sleeping, and leaves in the nooks and corners many brightly colored eggs for the "kinderkins." In the morning the children and their parents hunt for these eggs and great excitement. In Swabia and Hesse children are actually sent to the hare's nest in search of eggs. Mannheim goes still further, saying that the hare is reputed to be a fire and soul bringer and that children are supposed to be procured from the nests. It would seem, however, that the stork has largely usurped this function, which some persons will consider fortunate in view of the immense number of eggs laid by the hare.

The hare myth has penetrated also to England, and it is written: "In Warwickshire, at Colehill, if the young men of the parish can catch a hare and bring it to the parson before 10 o'clock in the morning of Easter Monday (the moon day), he is bound to give them a calf's head, 100 eggs and a goat, the calf's head being probably a survival of the worship of Baal or the sun as the golden calf."

The hare myth is of comparative recent adoption in this country. Not until the early sixties did the Presbyterians take note of the day. And New England was the last section of our country to bend—or unbend—in the direction of the Easter celebration.

So whether your Easter egg be laid by hen or hare is determined wholly upon what creed you profess. If you are a doughty Scotchman or his descendant, a blue Presbyterian, your Easter egg was doubtless laid by a barnyard hen in the round of her daily household duties and bought at the corner grocery, for there is no record of the timorous hare ever having entered the nursery of that revered and austere gentleman, John Knox. But if you come from the waterland, where the Easter hare is quite as important a personage as Der Kries Kringle, then you know that your Easter egg was brought from far, far off, some where in the tall grass, and laid beneath your pillow or, perchance, on the mantelpiece by none other than the fleet white hare.

Spencer County Goes "Dry."

Taylorsville, Ky., April 3.—The local option election was quiet in every part of the county. Both "wets" and "drys" worked diligently and determinedly through the entire day. Every precinct gave the "drys" a majority, while their total majority in the county was 554. The Goodwin Springs precinct was the closest, the "drys" winning there by one vote. Mt. Eden was the banner local option precinct, giving the "drys" 183 majority. Camp Branch gave the "drys" 101 majority. The remaining four precincts gave good majorities for prohibition.

AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON

Discussed In an Interesting Letter From Mr. J. R. Gore to The Sun.—Tariff a Puzzle.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Editor Sun:—This is a magnificent city; its arched domes, imposing statuary, marble buildings, picturesque parks, etc., etc., make it second to no city in the world, but—Springfield, with its 1,500 good souls, nestling as it were 'mid the blue grass hills of Kentucky, would be a more delightful feast for my eyes just at this moment.

I am just a little bit homesick—homesick to see my friends in Springfield. I would be de-lighted to hug some of my friends there—male friends, and to shake hands with my good women friends.

Congressman Ben Johnson's office is in the "House Office Building." This building is a mammoth structure, is built of marble, is four stories high, and covers one square. A "country fellow"—like the writer—can lose himself easily in this building. Why, it required three days of my time to learn how to go from the front entrance to the door of Mr. Johnson's office. The other day I walked four squares in this edifice—down one corridor, up another, down another and up another, just to test my ability to get back to the starting point. I got back without asking a policeman to tell me where "I was at," and I am now beginning to feel like I am some pumpkins—the kind of pumpkins Charlie Brady grows on his fine farm, near Springfield.

I have met a great many Congressmen since I have been here. Some of them are the best fellows you ever saw, and one can easily understand how they succeeded in getting into Congress—by this, that is all, but that's enough. I met a young Congressman by the name of Wickliff; he represents a district in Louisiana, and is just thirty-one years old. He's a mighty good looking fellow, and a mighty nice fellow, and he has a head full of good sense—all of which is attributable to the fact that his people originally lived a Kentucky—over in Nelson county. He will some day be Governor of his State, and later will represent Louisiana in the United States Senate. I do not state this emphatically, but just put it down as a prediction.

The tariff! That is the question—and I may add here, just by way of parenthesis, that it is a question that is not easily understood. There are a lot of gentlemen here who think they understand it, but they do not—not by a jugful. It is the most complicated thing in the world. Every paragraph is a separate and distinct Chinese puzzle, and the schedules are several Chinese puzzles within a Chinese puzzle. A few days ago a gentleman, who represents a district in an eastern State, and who is now serving his first term in Congress, arose to deliver a speech on the tariff. He was nice looking—dressed in the "conventional black"—the kind all

Kentucky grooms wear—and he looked as pompous as a colt in a fair ring. His voice was mellow, his sentences well rounded, and his words distinctly pronounced by syllables. I said to myself: "Now that fellow is going to make a good speech," but he had hardly begun before a lot of those "old stagers" commenced to pop questions into him—questions as perplexing as the itch—and under this unmerciful fire the young Congressman soon showed signs of fatigue. From where I was sitting in the gallery I could see that it would soon be a total collapse. But the new member was game, and he continued to do the best he could under the circumstances, but that was very poor. Why he actually heaved like an old saw mill engine when the saw strikes a knot in the log; and the "rooters" in the gallery giggled; old Joe looked his meanest, and there was a lot of "sardonic smiling" from members all over the House. I never felt so badly for anybody; and down deep in my soul my sympathy went out to him in his hour of bereavement. But he still stood still, notwithstanding his speech was no more than inarticulate murmuring. "Will the gentleman yield for a question?" thundered Champ Clark, "Now!" and the young member fairly choked, and he dropped in his seat with a thud. That fellow's sweet dream of a great speech, which he intended to send back home to his constituents, developed into a most horrid nightmare, and the sad part of it is, it must appear in the "Congressional Record."

I want to briefly relate the story of a suicide which occurred in this city a few days ago. Ordinarily I do not like to write about such things, but this is such a sad, it is not unusual, suicide, that I believe I may be forgiven for telling the story. An old man by the name of Chase, a cousin of Salmon P. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury under President Lincoln, stepped out onto Broadway at Herald Square, and shot himself through the brain. The old fellow was a carpenter in the Navy Yard, but a few weeks ago was dismissed, presumably because of his age. He had been faithful; he was industrious and sober, and year in and year out had labored to support himself and wife. He had complied with all the rules and regulations, made by his superiors, therefore his discharge was not due to any derelict of duty. He had simply arrived at that age where the stroke with the hammer was not hard enough, and he had to go to make room for younger men. He was a veteran of the Civil war; he was a patriot. He enlisted in the Union army when he was thirteen years old, and fought through four years of bloody conflict for the flag he loved. Three of his brothers were killed while fighting by his side. More than that, his ancestors followed Washington through the Revolution, and by their courage and patriotism helped to make it possible for our great Government to establish the Navy Yard from which this old man was discharged. He left a note, which said: "It is more than I can stand to be dismissed from my position as carpenter—to be dismissed by a Government that my ancestors helped to make, and that I helped to preserve, and that my three brothers died for. All around me men worked, and were kept at work, who could not speak the English language—who care naught for the flag that waves from the dome of our National Capitol. My heart is broken, and I want to die."

And this reminds me that we are like lemons—when we are "all squeezed out," we are cast away. Past loyalty doesn't count. A man is not measured by what he has done, but by what he CAN DO.

In this age of commercialism sentiment is as dead as the past, and a breath of hell is willing the Roses of Life.

DEATHS

Several Well Known People of Washington County Have Passed Away Within the Last Week.

Mr. John A. Hendren died last Wednesday at the home of his son, S. C. Hendren, in Louisville. Mr. Hendren was 78 years old and his death was due to the infirmities incident to old age. Prior to a few years ago he had made his home in Springfield, having engaged in several business enterprises at this place. In all of his business dealings he was absolutely honest and upright. At one time he was a member of the Fiscal Court of this county.

Mr. Hendren was a staunch member of the Baptist church. He was buried last Thursday, the services having been held at the Springfield Baptist church.

Mrs. Emma Purdon, wife of Mr. P. I. Purdon, died at the home of her husband April 4, after a lingering illness of consumption. Mrs. Purdon was formerly Miss Emma Kimberlin, a daughter of Mr. Thos. Kimberlin, and was only twenty-five years of age at the time of her death.

The funeral services were held Friday and the remains were interred in Bethlehem cemetery.

Mrs. Purdon was a good wife and a loving mother and The Sun extends sympathy to the husband, the three little children and the other relatives who survive the deceased.

In the death of Mrs. Mary E. Drane, which occurred Sunday morning at 4 o'clock, Washington county lost one of its best and most highly respected women. Pneumonia was the cause of Mrs. Drane's death. The deceased was before marriage Miss Mary Canary and was the widow of Nathan T. Drane, and an aunt of Messrs. Abram and Robt. Canary. Mrs. Drane was 70 years old last fall.

The funeral services were conducted at Bethlehem church Monday morning. Rev. R. L. Purdon officiating, and were attended by a large gathering, drawn together to pay their last respects to one whose virtues they had known and revered during her life.

JOHN W. LEWIS AND J. H. GRAHAM

Nominated by Republicans last Monday.

As was reported in The Sun last week the Republicans of the Eleventh Judicial District met in convention at Lebanon, March 31st, to nominate candidates for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney. The convention was organized by making Mr. B. N. Penick, of Marion county, temporary chairman and Dr. Reesor of Campbellsville, secretary. The temporary organization was afterward made permanent.

Upon nominations for Circuit Judge being called for, Hon. J. H. Graham placed in nomination Hon. John W. Lewis. This nomination was seconded by Hon. W. F. Neikirk. There being no other nominations Mr. Lewis was nominated by acclamation. Mr. Marshall Duncan nominated Hon. J. H. Graham for Commonwealth's Attorney and the nomination was seconded by Mr. Young. Mr. Graham was also nominated by acclamation. Both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Graham made speeches of acceptance, after which the convention adjourned.

Don't Whine

If things have gone wrong,
As you travel along;
And your burdens have heavier grown;
When sorely beset,
Don't set down and fret
And tearfully make your woes known.
Make your kick good and strong,
Make it loud—never long;
Play the man, but don't sit there and pine;
Then get up and go,
Straight ahead—strike a blow,
It's proper to kick—but don't whine!

Don't whine!
That's a thing that a baby may do,
But the world doesn't look for such conduct from you.
What if you are down and out?
If you know you are right,
Show the world you can fight,
Don't sit like a school girl and pout.
If you've got a kick coming,
Just start things a humming,
You'll find things will get into line.
There's a time to howl,
There's a time to growl,
But the world has no time for a whine!

Cunningham, Duncan & Company, -:- Springfield, Ky.

THIS TORPEDO WILL REVOLUTIONIZE WARFARE.

New Engine of Death Yields Inventor, Cleland Davis, Three Hundred and Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars a Year in Royalties.

(Hampton's Magazine for April)

The following article on the invention of a torpedo by Mr. Cleland Davis will be of interest to his Washington county friends. Mr. Davis is a nephew of Mr. A. Cunningham, of this place, and is well known in Springfield, where he has made frequent visits:

For generations naval experts have been saying to one another comfortably: "Ah, well. Whenever any man invents a gun that can pierce the armor plate we now have, another man will produce an armor his gun cannot injure," thus illustrating the constant rivalry between the forces of offense and defense. But it could hardly have been expected by any naval expert that one man should first invent a torpedo against which the underwater defenses of the modern battleship have proven ineffectual, and then, continuing in the same interesting occupation, invent a new armor plate which is held to be practically impervious to the rifled cannon of today.

Sooner or later we may expect to see the old problem of the irresistible force and the immovable body worked out, says Hampton's Magazine for April, Lieutenant Commander Cleland Davis, United States Navy, will start one of the new Davis torpedoes at one of the new Davis armor plates. And out of the resultant fragments the scientists will build a brand-new theory of strains and bursting charges.

It is something less than just to measure a man's value to this world by the amount of his income. Nevertheless, to say that Lieutenant Commander Davis has in a few short years expanded the $3,500 salary which his country pays him each year for his knowledge of naval matters as displayed in the Bureau of Equipments, at Washington, to approximately $375,000 annually as his share of the profits on a single invention, gives a pretty fair idea of the man's capacity. But Mr. Davis would resent such a characterization of his successes. To him the winning of the game has been a sufficient reward.

Mr. Davis is thirty-nine years old, and from the moment that he left his birthplace, Louisville, Ky., to enter Annapolis, he has worked to develop the opportunities offered by his profession. As a matter of course, he began to exercise his inventive faculties on means calculated to render war a hazardous and costly pastime. At first he began with just a few little things. He devised some improvements in gunnery, suggested one or two new ideas in torpedoes, and planned an explosive, armor-piercing shell which is now in use by the United States navy. All the time his grand idea was germinating. He had conceived the plan of a torpedo which should enter any ship at which it might be directed, and, after entering, explode in the vessel's vitals. His spare time has been given over to this ingenious device for ten years past.

His greatest difficulty was to find some means by which the torpedo might be reduced in weight, and yet retain the strength needed for the proper control of its powerful explosives. That was two years ago. It was difficult to obtain steel of sufficient strength that would be light enough. At last he tried an alloy with a comparatively unknown element, vanadium. He succeeded in reducing the weight of the torpedo from 1,000 pounds to 80 pounds, and yet retained all its strength. That made the torpedo a success and tests convinced the entire navy.

Now that it has been done the plan seems gloriously simple. The torpedo contains a double charge of explosive. Driven to its target by compressed air, after the fashion of the Whitehead, the first charge is exploded when the battle nose strikes the ship at which it is aimed. Really, it is an under-water cannon. The first charge exploded drives the forward part of the torpedo through the under-water armor of the vessel and well into the interior. Then the second charge is exploded—and, if all goes well, in the pleasant naval way of putting it, the ship sinks. The torpedo which has been in use for the past ten years is considered practically negligible in battle. It may jar the ship it strikes, or produce a dimple in its bottom, or possibly start a leak. But, according to the judgment of naval experts who have watched the performance of the new Davis gun, protection against this new torpedo may be secured only by armor the under-water portion of the battleship as heavily as that portion exposed to the projectiles of the thirteen-inch guns. They believe that this fact will mean, ultimately, a revolution in naval warfare.

Best Treatment For Colds.

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pay your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? RED BIRD

The great Saddle Horse, as great a breeder in the State. Will be limited to 25 mares, positively no more under any circumstances. All having good mares and want to breed to Red Bird book them at once. We are going to stand him at $30 TO INSURE A LIVING COLT TO STAND UP AND SUCCEED. You may think that high, but it is not, because you who have good mares stand so much better chance; that will do away with common mares. Mr. Pemberton, of Elizabethtown, the best saddle horse judge in the state, told me last fall that Red Bird was the best breeder in his knowledge, said he would soon have a colt by him as Bourbon King that stood at $60 last year and perhaps at $75 this season. Why gentlemen think of it, the great blood and what a reputation he has; that is worth $30. Red Bird has the highest price colts to sell from the tit than any horse I can mention; prices ranging from $100 to $212.

MOKO PEARL

STONEWALL

We having bought halt interest in Stonewall, or better known as Shelby Tuck, it is needless for me to try to tell you anything about him, for you know him as well as I do. You have heard of the $100 mules sold by him.

Gentlemen, I can say with safety and am sure you all agree with me that we have two of the best breeding Jacks in the country. I notice when weaning time comes, the best mule men of other counties as well as our own look to old Washington for good mules. I will be glad to show you our stock anytime, you come and will be glad to have you. Bills will be out by April 1st.

A Disastrous Fire.

Falcon: One of the most destructive conflagrations that has visited Lebanon in many years occurred about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning when a blaze was discovered in the building occupied by J. W. Thrapp, opposite the Hardesty Hotel. The fire was discovered by some one in passing, and an alarm turned in, the fire company responding promptly considering the hour, but the blaze had become so fierce that it was impossible to save the building, and the fire quickly spread to the adjacent buildings occupied by the Singer Machine Agency and E. Nicholson, the shoemaker, and also the livery stable of Crume & Bro. and McKnight's barber shop. The fire illuminated the whole town, and the heat was so intense that one could not remain standing on the sidewalk opposite the burning buildings. For nearly two hours the fire company battled with the raging fire before it succeeded in getting it under control, and it was a remarkable fight that fire chief Stoy and his men won in stopping it where they did. It was accomplished with the aid of bystanders by running several lines of hose into the old livery stable, and there saturating the hay, straw and building with water. It was a stubborn fire to fight, and it was only the fine work of our fire chief and his assistants that saved the owners of adjacent property. Fire Marshal Neikirk, who viewed the scene of destruction, said it was one of the best fought fires he ever saw, and that Lebanon had a fire company second to none. It is not positively known how the fire started but it is supposed to have originated from the kitchen flue in the Thrapp building. Mr. and Mrs. Thrapp and Mr. Geo. McKnight and family, who had living quarters in the upstairs of their respective buildings, had narrow escapes, and were forced to gain exits by means of ladders. A stiff breeze carried sparks for a considerable distance and the homes of Mrs. Mary Jarboe and Mrs. Julia Abell, both on Mulberry street, between Spalding avenue and Proctor Knott avenue, caught fire from flying sparks but were quickly extinguished with a bucket of water. Many residences in proximity to the fire had guards on the roof to watch for the sparks, and probably more residences than the ones we have mentioned were saved in this manner, but these were the only instances that we learned of.

Rheumatism.

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The first application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness. The medicines usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worse than useless in cases of chronic and muscular rheumatism. How to Cure Liver Trouble

Keep Your Bowels Regular and Your Stomach Sweet

People sometimes imagine when they have liver trouble or are bilious that the matter lies in the liver. It is not. The liver is a very different matter. The use of a violent cathartic does not mean the cure of constipation or the establishment of regular movements. A physic is an emergency remedy, but never a bowel treatment. If the bowels do not move regularly there is a reason deeper seated than the mere clogging up that is removed by a dose of salts or pills.

When that drowsy, tired feeling, with the coated tongue, the dull head pains, the sour stomach, the sallow complexion, the constipated bowels and touches of fever come on it is time to take a medicine that will act on the bowels gently and mildly, cleansing and strengthening them, stir up the liver and aid the stomach in digesting the food.

FOR DRESS ECONOMY

NOW IS THE TIME TO REFURBISH THE WARDROBE.

Costumes Beginning to Show the Signs of Hard Winter Usage Can Be Picked Out by the Clever Shopper.

The most fascinating factor in the feminine world at the present moment is the midwinter sale. Resourceful, wide-awake tradespeople know that about this time the average woman finds that her winter wardrobe, however skillfully planned two or three months back, needs refurbishing.

Evening frocks begin to look passe and street suits show signs of hard usage, while the stock of blouses surely runs low.

This article has to do particularly with the shopper who wishes to smarten her wardrobe and, by the expenditure of a little money at bargain sales, make said wardrobe tide her over to April at least.

You can find the silks these days on bargain squares at great reductions. If your broadcloth is in a standard color you can also match it in dyed net for the guilpe. Make the yoke and sleeves of net over mouseline. Have the bolero pattern stamped for braiding and do this by hand. From the silk cut bias folds for outlining the bolero and the trimming on the skirt. The little circles in the trimming you may embroider in self-tone silk or in metallic thread. Silver is beautiful on either gray-green or gray-blue and of course on gray. Copper or gold is better on the new brownish greens, catawba, London smoke, taupe, etc.

The net in sleeve and yoke should be laid in broad tucks without lace in-are built by makers who study you—who know what you want—who understand your figures, your ideas and your price-reach. Clothes made with such graceful shapes already in the garments that they'll improve a bad figure and set off a good one. They're real young men's clothes.

The label in the coat means that if you're ever disappointed you won't be disappointed long—if they're wrong, just give back the clothes and get back your money.

section, for the self-tone yoke and sleeves are now in vogue. This design can also be developed in making over messaline and cashmere dresses. The secret of its successful use as a make-over lies in the bolero, which hides the fact that the only part of the original dress left is the skirt.

Very coarse nets, braided and made over silk in the same tone, may be used for these boleros, also very heavy lace dyed to match the cloth, but velvet and fancy silks, such as pompadour or brocades, are not good for boleros. Either of these fabrics gives the effect of upholstery, as do ball trimming and fringe.

If you want a suit with which to replace the one bought early last fall, for pleasant winter days, and one that will last well into the spring, select an indefinable, neutrally-tinted stripe and make it according to the design shown in the illustration. Gray and green, closely allied in coloring, make a good combination for late winter and early spring wear, and just now you can pick up stunning remnants in suit lengths as low as five dollars. In 44-inch materials, which is the average width in novelty suitings, you will need seven yards unless you are very short, when six will suffice. The military coat and collar with simple lines are a relief after the extreme director styles. Select a self-tone braid for trimming the coat.

Have the buttons made of the cloth with self-tone centers to simulate the buttonholes, and your suit will be suitable for wear when the definite spring changes come in, as it will not be too reminiscent of winter modes. Do not use silk or satin buttons and cords for trimming, as these are distinctly passe.—Boston Globe.

Colored Embroideries.

On white frocks and muslin blouses that, being early made up for spring, there is a plentiful showing of colored embroidery.

The shops offer a large variety of it, and promise that it will be in first style all through the warm weather season. It will be especially popular on wash shirt-waists that fasten down the front and are to be worn every day.

Violet in two or three shades is quite to the front, and its rivals are pale blue, jade green and cobalt blue. The latter is quite effective, and gives a good touch to a dark blue suit. The embroidery comes in edging and insertion.

Col. Samuel H. Stone, auditor of the State of Kentucky during the administration of Governor Bradley, and one of the best known men of Kentucky, died at his home in Louisville Saturday of diabetes, from which he had long been a sufferer. He was buried at his old home town, Richmond.

Col. Stone was a fine type of the old Southern gentleman, a scholar, a fine business man and a politician of the highest honor. In his death Kentucky loses one of her most distinguished and useful sons.

Admiral Cervera, who commanded the ill-fated Spanish fleet at Santiago de Cuba, died in Spain on Saturday. Admiral Cervera was a fine, though unfortunate, naval officer and a polished gentleman, who made many friends in this country, when he was held here as a prisoner of war.

Object to Strong Medicines.

Many people object to taking the strong medicines usually prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by The Leo Haydon Drug Co.

The Republican Convention.

Marion Falcon: The delegate convention called by the Republican district committee to nominate candidates for circuit judge and commonwealth's attorney for this judicial district, was called to order by Chairman W. M. Grigsby, on Wednesday afternoon at the court house in Lebanon, about three quarters of an hour after the time advertised for convening. The delay was not explained until later when one of the delegates, in the course of a speech, disclosed the fact, that, in advance of the public and official meeting, there had been an executive session or private dress-rehearsal, at the hotel, where he, and presumably other delegates, had been assigned their respective parts for the public performance.

About twenty delegates were present from the four counties, and they sat around the table in the court room like a happy family, while the committee on credentials reported, orally, that there were no contests, that the convention was all right and that harmony was falling around in chunks.

The chairman, Mr. B. N. Penick had no trouble in making up his committees or in any of the other work assigned him, except an occasional difficulty in reading the names from the paper furnished him, in advance. We were somewhat surprised that even this slight obstacle to the smooth running had not been avoided by having this program typewritten instead of in manuscript form.

The committee on resolutions retired to the grand jury room up stairs, to consult and draw up resolutions appropriate to the occasion. To the many outsiders it appeared that, with the organizer of the movement, Mr. C. A. Johnston, unaccountably absent from the public session, some difficulty might be experienced by the committee in formulating a set of resolutions with the flowing periods and exalted sentiments to which we have become accustomed when that master of classic English is on the committee. The four proved groundless—and the resolutions, when finally presented, showed the hand of an expert of equal skill with Mr. Johnston. The delay of half an hour was not, as may have been supposed, caused by any difference or wrangling among the committee as to the wording of the resolutions, but only by the trouble they had in putting them in the neatly type-written form in which they were brought down and presented. The members of the committee were not accustomed to this peculiar make of type-writer, placed there for such purposes and were, quite naturally, slow in operating it, but they are to be congratulated on the neat appearance of the work when finally brought in.

Of course, you know, neither Mr. Lewis nor Mr. Graham had sought the office, but, though reluctant, were compelled by a sense of duty to accept the nominations when offered with such an overwhelming and united demand of the people of the district, for their unthought services. The way we know this is that we attended and heard them say so. Mr. Lewis in his speech of acceptance, insisted that the delegates there present, who had just voted to nominate him, should also promise to vote for him at the November election. Did he have reason to doubt the good faith of any of them, that he should several times ask them for such an unusual pledge. The demand was personal to those present, for he knew that they could not, by any promise, bind other Republican voters, especially those who had not participated in the county conventions.

He became really tragic in the vehemence with which he assured those present that, no matter what any one might suspect, or believe, he had no "boss."

We are not in the confidence of Mr. Lewis and do not know what impelled him, in the absence of any charge that he had a "boss," to undertake, before the men who had just nominated him, such an impassioned defense of himself against it. Did he have reason to expect that somebody might suspect him of having a "boss" or even make such a charge against him?

It would be interesting to know just what thoughts and reasons he had in his mind for anticipating that he would be charged with having a "boss" or who he thought might be suspected of holding that position. We must confess to a natural curiosity on this point.

Narrow Escape.

A very serious accident was narrowly averted on Saturday when the traction engine belonging to Mr. Maupin broke through a bridge on the St. Rose and Lebanon pike. The front part of the engine had crossed safely when the rear end broke through. Mr. Maupin, who was on the engine, attempted to jump, but was caught and pinned against the bridge and would have been killed had not a heavy board been between him and the engine so as to keep it off. It was some time before he was extricated as the bystanders were afraid to go to his assistance, fearing an explosion of the engine.

Arbor Day.

The students of the Springfield Graded School observed Arbor Day, April 2, with appropriate ceremonies. Each grade selected a tree and a flower, which they planted on the campus and dedicated to some alumnus or alumna, to some distinguished person or to some friend of the school. The pupils of two of the grades, the younger children, had recitations, while dedicatory addresses were made by Rev. W. F. Williams, Joseph Polin, Geo. Neikirk, Marshall Duncan, Walter Clements and Miss Mabel Williams. All of the speeches were appropriate to the occasion and commendatory of the pupils of the school for their interest in Arbor Day, and were enjoyed by the large audience which had gathered for the occasion.

EAGLE THRASHES A CAT, THEN AWAKENS POLICE

BIRD ROUTS TABBY, AND WHEN TAKEN TO STATION INVADERS DORMITORY.

New York.—Nature fakery and others who may think a cat can whip a gray eagle are respectfully referred to Joseph Solomon, who runs a butcher shop on Madison avenue, and Abraham Tiefer, who helps him. They got their information at first hand the other afternoon, when they saw a half-grown eagle easily whip a large cat.

It is Solomon's practice to have refreshments in his apartment in the rear of the store just before the late afternoon rush sets in, and the other day while he, Tiefer and Mrs. Solomon were discussing the repast a fearful squawking arose in the back yard, where Solomon daily throws scraps for the benefit of the cats of the neighborhood.

Rushing out they found Tom Grady, the largest and handsomest tiger cat in the district, in battle with a bird, with other cats fleeing in all directions from what looked to be a feathered Johnson in action. Tom was getting the beating of his nine lives when Tiefer got a large bag and threw it over the bird.

Then, followed by a large crowd, he ran to the station. He arrived there so excited that he could not say anything to Lieut. Connors but "bird cat." Connors was still wondering what was wrong when the bird answered the question by breaking out of the bag and flying straight for his head. Connors sidestepped, and the bird flew into the inspector's room, where policemen were playing checkers. They dropped the checkers to chase the bird, which made a line for the third floor, where more tired policemen were dreaming.

Thence the chase led to the inspection room once more, policemen in all states of dress and undress aiding in the pursuit, which, seemingly, was to be endless, until Hugh Montgomery the doorman, came to the rescue. Hugh goes fishing a great deal in the summer, and had a small net used to catch minnows handy. Deftly he threw it over the bird, and in a short time it was in an improvised cage, and the station settled down to its normal condition.

On examination the eagle was found to have escaped all but minor injuries at the hands of Tom Grady, and now awaits a claimant.

FAIR INDIAN MAID STOLEN.
Tahlequah Cherokee Girl Has the Time of Her Life.

Muskogee, Okla.—Because she possessed a lease which half a dozen of companies sought, Susie Turner, a Tahlequah Cherokee Indian girl, who lacked one month of being 18 years old, has spent that month in fairland kidnaped at night on a street of Tahlequah and driven 45 miles in a race to catch a train, the young Indian girl was hustled into a Pullman state room on the Katy Flyer, hurried out of Oklahoma, married to her sweetheart on the train, wine, dined and entertained at the expense of one of the rival oil companies, and has just been returned to Oklahoma, 18 years old Mrs. Moses Harris, and legally able to sign over a lease to the spendthrift oil men.

When a girl Mrs. Harris inherited valuable oil lands and as the day of her maturity drew near several concerns, among them the Holdenville Oil Company, appeared in the field as rivals for the rich leases. It was when the bargaining was just reaching a climax that the Holdenville crowd kidnaped the girl and kept her in the fairland of the east until she was old enough to give them the much sought-for lease.

Oddly Cured by Tramp.
Worcester, Mass.—Unable to leave his bed for three years, James A. Sutton, at his home near Rochdale, entered a tramp the other evening. The tramp told Sutton to get up and walk, saying: "I think if you tried you could get up and walk."

Mr. Sutton got onto his feet and found he could stand. When he did this the tramp looked surprised, and started to the door. Mr. Sutton spoke saying: "Come back, come back, and stay the night with us." But the tramp had disappeared in the darkness.

I recklessly declared that she possessed the sweetest voice that I had ever heard.
I sat alone with her and did my best to flatter her by look as well as word.
I told her that she had an angel's face, I raved about her "pretty, dainty feet," I vowed that she possessed a girlish grace which Venus never could have hoped to beat.

I threw off all restraint and wildly lied: Her beauty was superlative, I swore; I used up all the adjectives and tried to flatter as man never did before.

Aunt Cynthia's Easter.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

NEW minister had come to slow moving, out of the way Spruce Hill, and with his coming had appeared a spirit of change and improvement. He was fresh from his theological course and eager with youth and love for the work.

Hitherto the church had been to Spruce Hill a place of solemnity, only to be visited at required intervals and as a duty. Now, under the ministrations of this young zealot, it gradually came about that duty could be approached from many directions and not all of them were necessarily stony or narrow.

Among other innovations were the Easter sermon and church decoration. The new minister made the announcement one Thursday evening after prayer meeting and added that he hoped all would be present and that the ladies of the church would arrange for a tasteful and appropriate decoration.

After service the women stood about irresolutely, looking at each other with blank, questioning faces.

"I guess you'll have to excuse me, Mr. Kent," one of them said at last bluntly. "I ain't got any flowers, an' besides, I don't know anything about decoratin'."

"Nor me," "Nor me," "Nor me," came in rapid succession and in evident relief from the other women. "Tain't time yet for flowers to bloom."

"Can't we find a few callas and Easter lilies and narcissuses and perhaps some other white flowers?" asked the minister, with less confidence in his voice.

"All the houses in the neighborhood can't see up white posies enough for a buttonhole bouquet," declared one woman aggressively. "As for Easter lilies, I ain't never seen one an' narcissus I ain't never heard of. The idea of decoratin' a whole church at this time of year!"

"I've heard Mrs. Bray speak of narcissus," said a woman reflectively, "she that was the florist's wife, you know. An' come to think, she's likely a master hand at this decoratin' business."

"Who is Mrs. Bray?" asked the minister quickly. "Perhaps she can help me out with this. Curious I have not heard of her before."

"Oh, I don't know," dryly; "folks sort of die away from the world after they go into the poorhouse. Mrs. Bray's husband was for gettin' on, so he went to the city an' learned the florist's trade. For a time he done well. Then his business broke, an' he died. An' his wife come back here an' lived up what little she had. After that there was nothin' but the poorhouse."

"Well, we will find her," eagerly. "Will you go with me, Mrs. Perry?" "Why, yes; I don't mind if I do. Cynthia Bray was as much of a lady as anybody round."

The next afternoon the minister's backboard stopped in front of the poorhouse, and he and Mrs. Perry alighted. Several men and boys were slouching about the yard, and on a bench near the door were four or five old women. Mrs. Perry looked them over critically.

fance which lay between her social position and the poorhouse.

"Why, you poor soul," she cried sympathetically, "how old you're grown! My hair ain't begun to turn yet, an' here you'n is perfectly white."

"It's been a long time since you and I were young," answered the old woman gently. Then she colored with sudden remembrance and drew herself up stiffly.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she asked.

"Come, Cynthia; don't talk that way," remonstrated Mrs. Perry. "You know farmers' wives are always workin', an' an' it's a good piece from our place to the—"

"Poorhouse," said the old woman calmly.

"Well, yes, poorhouse," deprecatingly. "But never mind all that. I've brung the minister."

"I don't think I've had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Bray before," said the minister, rising, "and yet I've called here several times."

"No; we haven't met," acquiesced the old woman. "I generally stay in the kitchen."

"I must acknowledge this visit is mostly a business one, Mrs. Bray," he said, resuming his seat. "You see, I am planning to have the church decorated for Easter, but the ladies of my congregation assure me that such a thing is utterly impossible. I have come to you as a last resort. Can you help me?"

The old woman looked from one to the other with a sudden yearning in her eyes. Then a soft flush began to steal over her face.

"It ain't easy to decorate without anything to decorate with," she said tremulously. "In the city we used to have palms and Easter lilies and no end of ferns and delicate things to bank with."

"But there are the woods," suggested the minister desperately. "I notice lots of pretty things on my walks."

"Do you mean for me to take charge of the decoratin'?" she asked.

"Yes, but of course with plenty of help."

He turned hastily and glanced through the window. Something rattling in the expression on the old woman's face made him lose command of himself for a moment.

"Well, I shall need help in gathering the decorations," she was saying as he turned back. "There will be things to cut and bring home and boxes and boards to build up for the banking. There are some bushes along the creek that I can fix up to look very much like palms at a little distance, and that dark moss below the ledge will make a beautiful bank on which we can arrange the early white flowers."

"But, there," breaking into a low, joyous laugh, which apparently frightened her, for she stopped suddenly and looked about in a scared, tremulous sort of way.

"I was only going to say," she went on deprecatingly, "that I haven't seen the church yet. I ought to go there first and look around."

"Of course. We will take you there this afternoon," volunteered the minister, beaming.

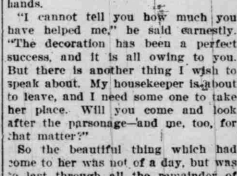

"And you can have my horse and wagon every afternoon if you like," added Mrs. Perry warmly. "Then there is my boy Tommy. You can have him to drive you."

The old woman's face was now absolutely radiant.

She was not thinking of the decoration now, but of the beautiful thing of not being forgotten. "God is good to have remembered me so lovingly!"

The minister gazed at her a moment, then turned again to the window. "There will be no failure in the church decoration," he remarked to Mrs. Perry.

Nor was there, nor in the beautiful thing that had come to the little old woman. During the decorating she Since Mrs. Tatum has added her military department to the store at this place, a great improvement is experienced in the general appearance of our local supply house.

Out sowing is completed in this section, and an unusual crop has been sown.

The L. & N. shanty cars that have been stationed here for several weeks, have been removed to Bardstown, where the carpenters will continue the repair work on the B. & S. division.

Farm work is progressing nicely in this section, and the farmers are ahead so far. Yet, if the dry weather continues the ground will become very hard and breaking will be difficult.

Those who are lucky enough to have early tobacco beds are fearing that the continued cool weather will prevent the young plants from growing, and it is possible that the late beds will prove to be the best.

DEEP CREEK.

This section of the country will very likely be the cultivated land of tobacco more than any other crop, as tobacco beds are seen on almost every farm and forests are being cut down in order to give way to land for tobacco grounds, and the logs are being sawed into lumber with which to build new barns or dwellings.

The saw mill of Mr. Henry Young, of this vicinity, which has been for the past three weeks on the farm of Mr. A. J. White, at the head waters of Long Run, left that section last week and moved to the farm of Mr. John H. Elliott, which is located on the head waters of Deep Creek.

Mr. John H. Elliott, Sr., who has been confined to his room for the past week, suffering from the bruises on the face, received from a falling limb while at work cutting saw logs, we are glad to report is at present able to be out again among his friends.

The veil of sadness fell over the home of Mrs. Belle Bottoms Wednesday when she received word of the death of her brother, Mr. John Roney, of Stewart, Ky., which occurred Tuesday night. The end was due to lung trouble, of which the deceased had been a sufferer a long time. The remains were laid to rest in the Carpenter grave yard Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. James Lowe, who has been confined to her bed since last fall, we are glad to report is at present able to be out again.

Your correspondent has been informed that efforts have been made to get up a Union Sunday School at the Long Run church and as the talk goes it will meet with success. Your correspondent hopes and trusts that all will, notwithstanding different religious meet to hear and understand the word of the One we came to honor as it will some day, with those who, he the same in heaven above where all followers of the Lord meet in union.

Chestnut Dare!

No. 3290. FOALED 1900.

This horse again showed his superiority over other Stallions last year in his own class and in sweepstake classes, defeating all the prominent Stallions in the adjoining counties. One of his winnings was the $100 sweepstake, defeating eight entries of first-class horses. He and his colts also won the herd ring. It's becoming stale to repeat, that not one of his colts of five seasons have ever been defeated by the colts of any horse owned or farmed in this county. Special rings of colts of other horses, claimed by some to be the best in the State, have been shown, but not one of these has ever won a tie, blue or red. All familiar with his breeding know he has more high price colts already to his credit than any horse now in the county and yet a young horse. Chestnut Dare combines the blood of the Chester Dares and Chief families. He is sired by Chester Dare 10, 3rd dam by Red Chief, 2nd dam by Black Hawk Chief, 3rd dam by Brinker's Drennon.

Noble Denmark

No. 2840

This handsome and handsomely bred colt will serve a limited number of mares at

$20 TO INSURE A LIVING COLT.

He is sired by the great show horse and breeder, Highland Denmark, 1st dam a State Fair winner by the Championship saddle horse, Thornton Star; 2nd dam by the Show Stallion, Art Rose by Artist and out of a Montrose mare. This Stallion is not only well bred, but a fine individual, proving himself a winner last year as a two-year-old; also as a yearling. He has great action for a youngster, a good step and the making of a great saddle stallion. Considering the breeding qualities of both his sire and dam and his own finish and conformation, he is sure to rank among the best as a sire.

Hackney Boy

Hackney Boy is a sorrel 16 hands high, a horse of good conformation, large flat bone and one of the Hackney type. He is four years old and his first colts are all good. He is sired by "Old County Member, 1st dam by Von Moltke, 2nd dam by Varick. He will make the season at

$20 TO INSURE A LIVING COLT.

I again thank the Breeders for their patronage and ask for a continuance of same in this and adjoining counties.

Sanbreaker in condition, is really a great show horse. He is good galloped, good banded, don't pull, don't hit, loves company and is perfectly mannered. He was raised where he has a trial. Mrs. A. perfect disposition in and out of the stall. Over the road he is perfect, afraid of nothing, easily controlled, perfect manners and a nice smooth pliable horse in every way, bred in the best lines and should prove a good stock horse.
